Moon Over Buffalo

Written by Ken Ludwig
Directed by Seth Ghitelman

George and Charlotte Hay are fading stars of the 1950s. At the moment, they're performing Private Lives and Cyrano de Bergerac in Buffalo, NY with five actors. On the brink of a disastrous split-up, they receive word that they might have one last shot at stardom: Frank Capra is coming to see their matinee, and if he likes what he sees, he might cast them in his next movie. Everything that could go wrong does go wrong in this valentine to the stage and the larger-than-life personalities that inhabit the world of the theatre.

Pride@Prejudice

Written by Daniel Elihu Kramer
Directed by Laura W. Andruski

Elizabeth Bennet and Mr. Darcy fall in love all over again—in this romantic deconstruction of Austen's beloved novel. Playfully reinvented with modern-day characters literally stepping off the page to blog, Google, and tweet, this homage to one of the world's most popular love stories is delivered with humor, wit, and just a little sass.
